

TUESDAY TALKS

Georgia Tech Faculty Speaker Series

George Washington and Slaves in the Executive Mansion

Abstract:

George Washington, a slave owner, did not give a second thought to staffing the President's House with human chattel from his Virginia plantation. Working in the Executive Mansion was better than working in the field, or even as an ordinary house slave. But two ran away to freedom.

ELEANOR ALEXANDER

Associate Professor
School of History, Technology, and Society

March 27
11:00-12:30pm
Neely Lobby
refreshments

Library and Information Center

Tuesday Talks is a series of lectures sponsored by the Georgia Tech Library featuring research by Georgia Tech faculty presented for the rest of us...

Research for all of us